BARS DOWN TO BUILDING

New Pantheon Structure Permitted.

BOARD OF HEALTH ACTS

Former Resolution Against Houses on Plague Sites Practically Rescinded.

A precedent was established by the Board of Health yesterday that will in all likelihood result in the rebuilding of a great portion of the burned district in Chinatown within the next few months.

According to a resolution of the Board passed during the plague times building permits were refused for the re-erection of buildings on lands where plague had existed until the sewerage system was completed so that the new building could be connected directly with the sewers and the necessity of cesspools be done away with.

But yesterday after a discussion lasting over an hour it was decided to permit the rebuilding of the corner of Fort and Hotel streets, formerly occupied by the Pantheon Stables. Several cases of plague were found in this corner and the whole block of buildings were ordered burned by the Board on Feb. 7th last. Since that time L. C. Ables has made several efforts to obtain permission from the Board to rebuild the place but it was refused for the reason that the sewerage system had not been completed so that connection could be made directly with it.

W. O. Smith appeared with Mr. Ables yesterday to present the case to the Board and it was finally agreed to permit the work of building to go on with the reservation that no steps be taken towards occupying it or building a cesspool until after a special committee appointed for that purpose should report on the matter.

In presenting the case of the Ables people Mr. Smith said at the outset that he did not believe that the Board had any right to take such arbitrary action on building permits. Those should be issued by the Board of Public Works, but on applying there he had learned that a permit had been refused at the instance of the Board of Health.

"That was done," said Dr. Wood, "in compliance with the order of the Board that no buildings be erected where plague had existed until after sewer connection had been made."

"And we contend that just therein lies the injustice of the matter," said Mr. Smith, "for it is not the fault of the people who wish to build upon this property that the sewerage system is incomplete and it is out of their hands entirely."

"When the resolution was passed by the Board," explained Dr. Wood, "it was for the purpose of preventing the promiscuous erection of buildings in the burnt district, which would have resulted soon in conditions similar to those that existed before the plague broke out, with cesspools everywhere and sanitary conditions the worst. We expected at the time of passing the resolution that the sewerage system would be nearly completed ere this and that buildings could be erected then without violating the order of the Board."

"We are willing to do anything within reason to follow the orders of the Board," said Mr. Smith, "if the Board will but permit work to begin on the building. We'll put in a water tight cesspool, and we'll burn every particle of dirt that we take from the ground in digging the cesspool."

Dr. Wood said that as the Pantheon buildings had been burned more than five months ago he thought that the danger of an outbreak of plague from that spot was entirely past, but he feared to establish a precedent of the kind as in many other places where permits had been refused the fires had occurred within a less period and these might still be danger.

Dr. Freeman moved that a committee of three be appointed to consult on the matter of restrictions on cesspools and the erection and occupying of buildings on property where plague had existed.

This motion carried and at the earnest request of Mr. Smith, The Board also passed a resolution permitting the Pantheon people to go ahead with the erection of their new building, provided that no steps were to be taken towards occupying it or digging a cesspool until a report from the committee had been received and permission had been granted from the Board.

TO SAVE A HORSE.

Veterinarian P. R. M. of Tracheotomy on a Fine Animal.
Among the splendid cavalry horses brought down from San Francisco on the Leelanaw yesterday was one poor beast suffering from congestion of the lungs. He is a fine horse and a valuable animal, too.

For eight days has he been in a most serious condition, and even now it is not known whether he will live or not. During the animal's sickness the veterinarian has attended him as a physician would tend a human patient, and the suffering brute has shown his gratitude as plainly as a man would show his appreciation of benefits received, with the exception of his incapacity to speak in words which men understand.

Yesterday the veterinarian, seeing that severe measures were necessary in order to save the stallion's life, performed tracheotomy.

After a tube had been inserted in the horse's wind-pipe he walked slowly up and down the Pacific Mail dock, his eyes full of suffering, tossing his head up and down at regular intervals, foaming at the mouth, working hard for every breath he breathed into his lungs. The veterinarian walked with him and petted and soothed him as much as possible. The horse understood, and every now and then would rub his head on the veterinarian's shoulder. Sometimes he would walk over to a corner by himself and suffer in silence, then, desiring human sympathy, he would walk up to his doctor to be cared for and comforted. It was thought last night that the animal would not live, but the veterinarian did not despair.
